I TOLD YOU SHE WEREN'T 'ERE.
KNOCK
WOT THE FUCK! SINCE WHEN DOES SHE BUGGER OFF WITHOUT TELLIN' US?
YOU WANT TO GO SEE TOBY 'BOUT IT? HE SHOULD BE WITH THE REST OF THE 'RREGULARS AT--
SOD THAT SHIT! WHY'S SHE ALWAYS LEAVING 'IM IN CHARGE, EY?
'CAUSE YOU'RE ALWAYS BUNKIN' OFF EVERY TIME SHE--
'ERE, DON'T GIVE ME NO STICK 'BOUT THIS. WE DON'T NEED THEM. WE'LL DO THIS OURSELVES, SHOW 'ARLEQUIN AND ALL. YOU COP THAT?
It is with a certain nostalgia that I look back to my times on Baker Street. A time of growing and discovery amongst the backdrops of murder and pain.
It all started when I had left the Americas in hopes of furthering my studies in medicine at London's Wisteria University.
Unfortunately, my school work started to take second place to the adventures I had been thrust into and I eventually found myself spending more time writing about it all than studying.
IRREGULARS
To save on money, I thought I would take a job keeping house in exchange for room and board. Instead I ended up taking part in the mysteries of my housemates as they solved crimes around the punk quarter of London.
The punk quarter was a life I had never known, a life that I would soon claim as home. But for my housemate Sharon Ford, or "Harlequin" as the gangs knew her, it was a world that fed her appetite for mystery and deduction, and more often than not got me into trouble.

Now those troubles seemed a world away, or at least as many miles as I could put between them. It was one of the few times I could actually get Sharon away from Baker Street and the mysteries that ruled her life.
But after the "Ripper" case and its awful conclusion, it was a needed vacation for us both.
For Sharon, it was a time filled with the memories of pain and regret over the loss of her lover and our roommate, Sam.
For me, it was a chance to get to know the person that was an inspector, addict, punk lord and friend. A mystery hidden to herself that offered no easy solutions to my curiosity.
YOU KNOW, THIS IS SUPPOSED TO BE A VACATION.
WHAT?
I SAID, THIS IS SUPPOSED TO BE A VACATION. YOU KNOW, RELAX, GET YOUR MIND OFF THINGS.
I AM. I'M READING.
NO, YOU'RE THINKING ABOUT WHATEVER'S GOING ON BACK HOME. EITHER THE GANGS AT THE BOOKER VILLAS OR WHATEVER CASE FINDERS WORKING ON.

C'MON, SHAROU. I KNOW YOU WELL ENOUGH TO TELL THAT WHENEVER YOU START FROM THE BACK OF THE PAPER, YOU'RE PREOCCUPIED WITH SOMETHING BESIDES THE NEWS.
YES, WELL, WHO'S A CLEVER BOY THEN?
HEH. BLAME YOURSELF. YOU'RE THE ONE WHO TAUGHT ME TO "OBSERVE ALL AND EVERYTHING" THAT EVEN THE SIMPLEST OF CURIOS--
ALRIGHT, ALRIGHT, SIR. IT'S A FAIR COP.
ACTUALLY, I WAS THINKING ABOUT LANGFORD AND HIS DAUGHTER'S MURDER.
I DON'T THINK THIS WAS A GOOD TIME TO LEAVE TOWN AND ALL.
YOU'LL NEVER THINK IT'S A GOOD TIME, BUT YOU NEED TO GET AWAY.
BESIDES, I THOUGHT YOU SAID THERE WAS NOTHING MORE YOU COULD DO ABOUT THE CASE. I MEAN, YOU GOT JIM CLEARED OF THE MURDER CHARGES. THIS WHOLE THING WAS JUST A SETUP FOR LANGFORD'S CANDIDACY TO THE HOUSE OF LORDS, AND HE TURNED OUT TO BE JUST AS INNOCENT TO THE MURDER AS JIM WAS.
WE KNEW WHY ABBY WAS MURDERED, BUT ONLY LANGFORD KNEW WHO DID IT.
SO, WHAT NOW? DO YOU HAVE AN IDEA WHO WAS BEHIND THIS ALL?

NO. AND GETTING ANOTHER CHANCE TO QUESTION 'IM ABOUT IT WILL BE MORE THAN DIFFICULT.
WHAT?
LANGFORD! OH MY GOD, HE'S BEEN MURDERED? BUT WE WERE JUST THERE... SIR WILLIAM LANGFORD, LOCAL CANDIDATE TO THE HOUSE, WAS FOUND MURDERED ON HIS ESTATE...
"CAUSE OF DEATH HAS BEEN DETERMINED AS STRANGULATION. THERE WAS NO EVIDENCE OF A BREAK-IN OR THEFT, AND IT IS THOUGHT THAT THIS MAY BE CONNECTED TO THE RECENT MURDER OF HIS DAUGHTER..."
WAIT; YOU DON'T THINK JIM...
NO I DON'T. JIM BLAMED ABBY'S FATHER FOR HER DEATH, BUT HE WASN'T MOTIVATED ENOUGH TO TAKE REVENGE ON IT. LANGFORD, HOWEVER, DID KNOW WHO THE KILLERS WERE.
OBVIOUSLY, KEEPING 'IM QUIET WAS OF MORE VALUE THAN HIS POSITION TO THE HOUSE. I HAVE A FEELING ALL THIS IS PART OF SOMETHING VERY COMPLICATED AND VERY SINISTER.
THIS ISN'T GOING TO WAIT TILL AFTER THE TRIP, IS IT?
WHO'S A CLEVER BOY...

THEIR ANCESTORS WERE SURVIVORS OF THE BOMB AT NAGASAKI.

RADIATION HAD AFFECTED THE BLOODLINE.

IT WAS RUMORED THAT THEY HAD TELEPATHIC ABILITIES.

IN ANY CASE, THEY SAID NOTHING.

THEY SIMPLY BROKE INTO A VICIOUS SORT OF SPARRING.

THE SITUATION WAS SHEER ABSURDITY.. LIKE ALICE IN WONDERLAND WITNESSING THE FIGHTING PARADOX OF TWEEDLEDUM AND TWEEDLEDEE.

I MARVELED AT THEIR ATHLETIC FINESSE AND PHYSICAL REFINEMENTS.

THEY POSSESSED A DANCE-LIKE GRACE THAT I MYSELF CONSTANTLY STRUGGLED TO ATTAIN.

AN ECHO OF DEJA VU RANG IN MY HEAD.

THEY REMINDED ME OF MY OWN DUALITY AND THE STRUGGLE WITH SELF FOR WHOLENESS.

THE INSTRUCTOR TOLD ME THEY WERE BORN AS TWINS JOINED AT THE SHOULDER AND GIVEN BIOTECH LIMBS AT THE POINT OF SEPARATION.
SO.. THEY WERE PHYSICALLY FLAWED LIKE MYSELF. EACH OF US WERE PRODUCTS OF WAR AND SOCIAL OUTCASTS BECAUSE OF OUR DEFORMITIES.
I IMMEDIATELY BECAME INFATUATED WITH THEM BOTH AS A UNIT.
I FELT THEY WERE THE ONLY SOULS CAPABLE OF RELATING TO MY OWN PERSONALITY.

SECRETLY, I LONGED TO BE BETWEEN THEIR GRAPPLING ARMS.
THIS IS SOMETHING I HAVE TOLD NO ONE.
COULD ANYONE LOOK INTO MY DISFIGURED FACE AND RETURN MY AFFECTIONS?
INSTEAD, I AM CONTENT TO FALL IN LOVE...
...WITH MY OWN...

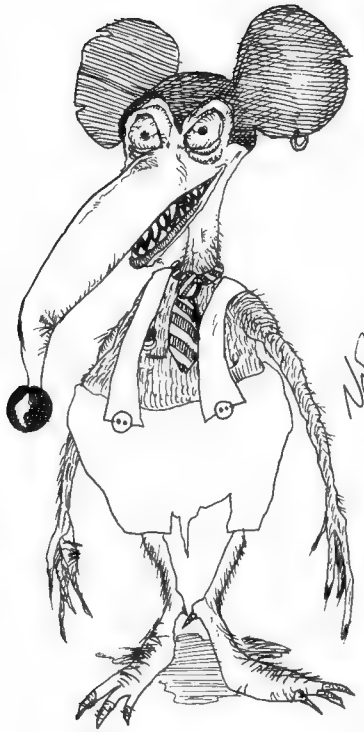
"The self-portrait was a sketch that I used as a basis for a page-long comic congratulating Brian Hibbs on the fifth anniversary of his comic store, Comix Experience."



"One of the two drawings I've done in the last year to order. The other was the opening screen to a security program called SATAN."

Following page:

"This was a try-out page I did for my 24 hour comic, some years ago. I was experimenting with techniques, and here you see me discovering that the Feiffer confessional technique with nice simple cartoony faces is a hell of a lot harder than it looks. I only did this page, so never quite got to find out who the young lady was, nor who she was talking to, nor what they were doing."

Dear Rick
In my dream last night I was a Body inspector.
It was my job to look for bodies.
KNOCK KNOCK
13
I went in this terrace of houses, Row by row.
In one house the man was nervous and gave me coffee.
OPEN UP! BODY INSPECTOR!

He didn't have a body anywhere, though.
Finally I went to the chip shop on the corner
FISH & CHIP
OPEN
Under the Fryer was the stiff body of a small girl.
They said someone had left her there. They didn't know what to do. They hid it.
I told them off.
It is very unhygienic.
Sorry.
Body Inspectors are important.

Left and below left:

"This was done more recently for Rick Veitch's RARE BIT FIENDS. I woke up from the dream in question, grabbed a piece of paper and drew it. Then, as is rather the way of dreams, I forgot all about it, two-page comic and all. When Joe Pruett asked for some sketchbook stuff, my trusty assistant brought me a file on which she had written 'Pieces of paper with drawings on them', and this was in there. Rick said he was happy for it to see print here and that you should all rush out and buy Rare Bit Fiends."

Below:

"Every now and again I find myself consumed by an urge to draw. I usually get this out of my system by drawing postcards which I then send to people, and never see again. Sometimes there are whole series of Cards – the 'Father Christmas and Mister Hyde' sequence is one of which I am still very fond. For some reason I kept a very bad photocopy of these two."

The Sad Case of Professor Woodbury

by Mark Ricketts, inspired by Moebius' cover art

A gyroscope malfunction had set Professor Woodbury adrift in a dirigible Windwalker over a man-made plasma ocean created during the Horyna revolt. The water and liquid nutrient storage sacks above his head nearly depleted, he would have to attempt a landing, no matter how dangerous. His only hope was to reach one of the abandoned military outposts constructed on stilts high above the ion crackle. Woodbury had started to hallucinate - a sting from some kind of winged poison jellyfish had affected his vision - reducing the outpost platforms to dark shapes that seemed to bubble and molt like lava whenever he approached for a landing. Incontinent from fear and exhaustion, he circled one platform for more than three hours while babbling to his deceased wife about her drinking problem.

"Relax. Let your mind roam free."

"Specs" adjusted his glasses and leaned out of the lone Quonset hut still standing in the deserted settlement. "Kozinski, looky this!" he cried. Cheroot clenched between his teeth, Kozinski dug his head deeper into the pillow on his hammock and squinted his eyes through the smoke.

"What is it, Specs, another one those flyin' globbers?" Kozinski studied the skull he'd drawn over the face of Miss February nailed to the wall.

"It's a Windwalker! Swear to God!" Specs cried out, rushing toward the platform. Kozinski flung himself from the hammock, knocking into the potbelly stove standing in the corner and sending a cast iron frying pan crashing onto his bare feet.

"You have nothing to fear."

Specs flapped his arms like an enraged stork in an effort to guide the Professor's descent onto the platform. Kozinski hobbled out of the hut toward Specs with an iron hook and a coil of rope. "Stop gawkin', dickweed," Kozinski yelled, flicking Specs' ear. "Give me a hand!" Specs adjusted his glasses with a twitch of his nose and tied the rope to the handle on the underside of the platform. Kozinski twirled the hook like a cowboy swinging a lariat and let fly. The hook caught the Windwalker's frame, along with part of Woodbury's arm. As Kozinski and Specs pulled the teetering craft closer to the surface, the cage holding the Professor snapped open, loosening one of the metal clips that connected the cage to the balloon. He clutched the frame in panic, reaching frantically to return the catch to its locked position, but instead tumbled headfirst into the barbed fence surrounding the platform. Struggling to escape the metal thorns that tightened around him like a quilled python, the needles tearing through his clothes and flesh, the frenzied man fought to pull himself free. As blood streamed from his forehead, impairing his vision, he crawled toward Kozinski and Specs as they wrestled with the Windwalker.

"What are you thinking right now?"

Kozinski held the Windwalker's cage steady as Specs climbed inside. "I can steer this bitch!" shouted Specs over the roar of the wind. "Damn right you will..." Kozinski barked, lashing himself to the outside of the cage. Professor Woodbury reached the craft only to be kicked in the face by Kozinski just as it lurched into the air. He watched the Windwalker slowly drift away from the outpost, straining under the weight of the two men. Suddenly, the cage carrying Kozinski and Specs tore loose from the balloon and dropped into the plasma bath with a blinding splash of light. The shrieks, quick and shrill, echoed for a moment before dying away. Horrified, the Professor closed his eyes. When he opened them again he was no longer on his knees at the abandoned outpost, but strapped to a machine, his face bathed in the green light of its readouts. After a few disoriented moments he recognized the worn black leather couch and the Lucien Freud print that decorated the office of his old friend and colleague, Dr. Gerald Mitchell.

"What are you thinking, Woodbury?" A round, bearded face leaned into the green light.

"The technology is incredible! The Windwalker flight was terrific, and I saw people, they were so...alive !" Woodbury thought a moment. "It really felt as if my flesh was being torn when I hit the barbed wire, you know?"

"Yes, I saw it all," Dr. Mitchell replied, patting a small video monitor. "I'll replay the video after the session is over. The graphics are a bit primitive, but..."

"You could have canceled the program before I fell, you sadistic bastard!"

"Calm down, Woody."Dr. Mitchell examined the Professor's eyes with an instrument that spread the lids apart, a pulsating beam searching for abnormalities in his irises. "There are a variety of possibilities to the Windwalker program. However, your characteristic mechanisms, fear, anxiety, even joy - pathways to the preconscious, in short - drive the action."

"Oh yeah, my ego, id, inner child, and, of course, my mother was there to persecute me, with you at the helm, right?"

"What if I said that this session has been extremely helpful and, well, revealing. "

"Look, Mitchell, I came here to fulfill a bargain. Your dean said you needed volunteers and I want the chair on the grad committee. I expect you to conduct this test in a professional manner."

"These tests are very sensitive, Woody. It's no coincidence you were pressured into becoming a part of this particular experiment. I needed a guinea pig whose habits I was familiar with. Ready for more?"

"Do I have a choice?"

"We're going to accelerate the program." Dr. Mitchell tapped at the keyboard connected to the back of the machine. "The patterns will change at random. We may stir up an emotional beehive, Woody, so don't be surprised if something delicate buzzes to the surface."

"You love torturing me, don't you?" The Professor jerked back into the cushioned seat.

"I can stop this at any time..." Dr. Mitchell's voice trailed off. Woodbury closed his eyes tightly, feeling a slight tingling sensation at the base of his skull. "Good God, Mitchell, you sound like Marion."

When the Professor opened his eyes he was soaring through blue sky in a dirigible Windwalker.

"It's like sailing to heaven, isn't it, Henry?"

The Professor turned to see his wife, Marion, flying in a Windwalker beside him. Against the sun's light, with her beige jumpsuit, pale skin, and blonde hair she was almost invisible.

"Marion?" he called out to her in disbelief. She vanished as the Professor was immersed in the milky white of a cumulus cloud.

"You know she's having an affair?" a voice echoed from his left.

"You." As the cloud dissipated the Professor recognized Specs standing beside him on an outpost platform. He casually swirled a snifter of brandy, gazing up at the two Windwalkers circling above them.

"She's like a rabbit," Specs turned his gaze to look over at Professor Woodbury," ...or should I say,they are like rabbits. You should do something about that wife of yours before the scandal spreads campus wide." Specs took a sip of his brandy, then spread his lips apart to expose clenched teeth.

" Calm down, Woody, I'm attempting to slow down the program."

Specs smiled as the Professor buried his face in his hands.

"I told you Marion was too young and pretty for you, but you were the brilliant scholar and she the adoring student." Another voice sounded from behind the Professor, who turned to see the misty outline of Kozinski gradually solidify. "You should have given her the high hard one and left it at that." He advanced slowly, his figure shimmering like a holograph.

"Do you want me to pull you out?"

Specs laughed quietly while filling a syringe with brandy.

As Kozinski stared into his eyes, Woodbury was instantly enveloped in a tidal wave of memories, smells, voices, tastes. The Professor trembled.

Kozinski took a deep bow like a proud magician, and when he arose he had transformed into Marion. Her hair was in flames, her skin beginning to crackle and hiss as fire licked her face. "Professor, there's a gyroscope malfunction in your Windwalker. You're losing control. You're going to crash. You're going to die," Specs whispered and injected warm liquid into Woodbury's arm.

Marion, the rictus of a smile on her scorched face, blew a kiss.

"Mitchell, she wants me dead!" the Professor cried out, grasping tightly to the metal bars of the balloon's dangling cage as the Windwalker went into an uncontrollable spin. On the platform below, Kozinski lifted a hook with rope trailing behind it that sailed toward the professor. The hook connected, catching the side of the Windwalker, and the rope pulled taut. A stiff line lead from the Windwalker, which had stopped spinning, to the side of the outpost platform. The professor's sight became fuzzy and the three figures on the platform appeared to merge into one. "I've got you, Professor." Though it was clearly Specs holding on to the Windwalker's frame, the voice was Dr. Mitchell's.

"We'll get you out of this." Kozinski said as he held onto the other side.

Standing on the edge of the outpost platform, Marion tied a black scarf around her head and put on a pair of sunglasses. She paused for a moment, then turned and walked away. The three men watched helplessly as the Windwalker cage separated from the balloon, sending them windmilling downward. Suddenly the professor's eyes filled with bright light, then darkness.

Dr. Mitchell tore the VR headgear off the Professor.

"Marion's trying to kill me!" the Professor cried out as Dr. Mitchell slapped his face.

"What are you talking about, Woody, Marion's been dead for over a month now."

"What?! What are you saying?" The professor tried to focus his eyes as he fell forward, hanging from his straps.

"Marion died in a car accident, Henry."

"Oh... no..."

"We can begin to work through it now."

"You don't understand."

"You can work through this..."

"I killed them."

"What are you talking about?"

" The two men... the ones that tried to pull Marion from the crash. The explosion! Oh my God, Mitchell... I killed them."

"First of all, you weren't even present when Marion died, and I'm a bit more qualified to interpret th..."

"Don't you see," tears streamed down Professor Woodbury's face. "I only meant to kill her."

C'MERE, NIKKI HOLD STILL!
YOU'VE GOT INK EVERYWHERE. STICK OUT YOUR TONGUE
NO I.. EWWW!
WOULD YOU STOP IT! I AM NOT A CHILD

HI
IT'S ME, SUZY.
YOU'RE PROBABLY WONDERING WHY I'M DRESSED AS A PANDA.
WELL, ER....
I'M GOING TO A PARTY AND I FOUND THIS GREAT COSTUME IN THE THEATRE DESIGN DEPARTMENT AND I THOUGHT.... DAMN! DID YOU SEE WHO JUST WALKED IN?
IT'S DICK SPRINGER! THE GUY'S A PAIN IN THE BUTT! MAYBE IF I PUT MY HEAD BACK ON HE WON'T KNOW IT'S ME!
YOU PROBABLY DON'T KNOW HIM... HE TEACHES FOUNDATION AT MY ART-SCHOOL... JEEZUS! HE THINKS HE OWNS ME! HE THINKS ROTHKO IS GOD!!
HE WON'T STOP PESTERING ME... HE CAME KNOCKING ON MY DOOR THE OTHER NIGHT... IN THE MIDDLE OF A RECORDING! JUST BECAUSE I MOVED INTO HIS FLAT FOR A FEW WEEKS! I HAD TO GET AWAY FROM LINDA!
SHE'S GONE ALL WEIRD! SHE GOT RELIGION. I COULDN'T TALK TO HER ANY MORE. ALL KINDA' WEIRD PEOPLE WITH WEIRD NAMES KEPT COMING ROUND... SITTING ON THE FLOOR AND, KINDA', CHANTING! I CAN'T STAND PEOPLE WHO SIT ON THE FLOOR! REALLY SHITTY!
ANYWAY, I'M AT CLIFF'S NOW. HE'S OKAY. HE SITS IN CHAIRS LIKE NORMAL PEOPLE! I'VE GOT A STUDIO THERE... AND RECORDING EQUIPMENT. HE'S A MARQUIS OR SOMETHING. BUBBLES IS REALLY PISSED ABOUT IT. BUT SPRINGER FOUND OUT WHERE I LIVE!
I HOPE YOU DON'T MIND ME TELLING YOU ALL THIS, I MEAN... HELL! I THINK HE'S SPOTTED ME! GOD, HE'S SO BORING! I GOTTA GO! IT'S BEEN NICE TALKING TO YOU...
HOW'S RICKENBACKER?
SHE'S MY BEST STUDENT, YOU KNOW. VERY TALENTED... A LOT OF POTENTIAL THERE. BUT SHE HAS TO BE CHANNELLED... MOLDED... NURTURED.
DO YOU LIKE ROTHKO?
DIDN'T HE KILL HIMSELF?
